Royal Society for the prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

Offices, 12 Pall Mall, London,

March, 1855.

Gentlemen,

I am instructed by the Committee of this Society to inform you, that the benefits which have arisen from its efforts have been attended with such good results in the Metropolitan districts, that they are desirous of extending its usefulness more generally throughout the Provinces, by the formation of Branch Societies, and as their success depends so much upon the influence and position of the parties who may take an interest in such objects, the Committee conceive there can be no better way of extending the benefits of the Society, than through the instrumentality of the County Magistrates.

I therefore respectfully solicit your attention to this subject, and in any advice or assistance you may require in carrying out this laudable work, I am instructed to assure you of the most cordial co-operation of the Committee.

I have the honor to be,

Gentlemen,

Your most obedient Servant,

Geor Middleton,
Secretary.
